Th' insulting victor presses on the more, Dryden.

And treads the steps the vanquish'd trod before.

She is always drawn in a posture of walking, it being as natural for Hope to press forward to her proper objects, as for Fear to fly from them. Addison on Ancient Medals.

Let us not therefore faint, or be weary in our journey, much less turn back or sit down in despair; but press cheerfully forward to the high mark of our calling. Rogers.

3. To make invasion; to encroach.

On superior powers

Were we to press, inferior might on ours. Pope.

4. To crowd; to throng.

For he had healed many, inasmuch that they pressed upon him for to touch him. Mar. iii. 10.

Counsel the may; and I will give thy ear

The knowledge first of what is fit to hear:

What I transact with others or alone,

Beware to learn; nor press too near the throne. Dryden.

5. To come unseasonably or importunately.

6. To urge with vehemence and importunity.

He pressed upon them greatly; and they turned in. Gen.

The less blood he drew, the more he took of treasure; and, as some construed it, he was the more sparing in the one, that he might be the more pressing in the other. Bacon.

So thick the shivering army stands,

And press for passage with extended hands. Dryden.

7. To act upon or influence.

When arguments press equally in matters indifferent, the safest method is to give up ourselves to neither. Addison.

8. To press upon. To invade; to push against.

Patroclus presses upon Hector too boldly, and by obliging him to fight, discovers it was not the true Achilles. Pope.

PRESS. n. f. [pressio, Fr. from the verb.]

The instrument by which books are printed, he will print them out of doubt, for he cares not what he puts into the press, when he would put us two in. Shakespeare.

3. Crowd; tumult; throng.

Paul and Barnabas, when infidels admiring their virtues, went about to sacrifice unto them, rent their garments in token of horror, and as frightened, ran crying through the press of the people, O men wherefore do ye these things. Hooker.

She held a great gold chain yinked well,

Whose upper end to highest heaven was knit,

And lower part did reach to lowest hell,

To catchen hold of that long chain. Fairy Queen.

Who is it in the press that calls on me?

I hear a tongue, shriller than all the musick, Shakespeare.

Cry, Caesar. Julius Caesar.

Death having prey'd upon the outward parts,

Leaves them insensible; his siege is now

Against the mind; the which he pricks and wounds

With many legions of strange fantasies; Each

PRE

Which in their throng, and press to that last hold,

Confound themselves. Shakespeare. King Lear.

Ambitious Turnus in the press appears,

And aggravating crimes augment their fears. Dryden.

A new express all Agra does affright,

Darah and Aurengzebe are join'd in fight;

The press of people thickens to the court,

Th' impatient croud devouring the report. Dryden.

Through the press enrag'd Thalestris flies,

And scatters deaths around from both her eyes. Pope.

There's ev'ry piece as big as ten. Swift.

PRESUMABLY. adv. [from presume.] Without examination.

Authors presumably writing by common places, wherein, for many years, promiscuously amassing all that make for their subject, break forth at last into useless rhapsodies. Brown.

TO PRESUME. v. n. [presumere, Fr. presumo, Lat.]

1. To suppose; to believe previously without examination.

O much deceiv'd, much failing, hapless Eve!

Of thy presum'd return! event perverse!

Experience supplants the use of conjecture in the point; we do not only presume it may be so, but actually find it is so. Government of the Tongue.

2. To suppose; to affirm without immediate proof.

Although in the relation of Moses there be very few persons mentioned, yet are there many more to be presumed. Brown.

I presume,

That as my hand has open'd bounty to you,

My heart dropp'd love; my pow'r rain'd honour more

On you, than any. Shakespeare. Henry VIII.

3. To venture without positive leave.

There was a matter we were no less desirous to know, than fearful to ask, lest we might presume too far. Bacon.

4. To form confident or arrogant opinions.

The life of Ovid being already written in our language, I will not presume to far upon myself, to think I can add any thing to Mr. Sandys's undertaking. Dryden.

5. To make confident or arrogant attempts.

In this we fail to perform the thing, which God seeth meet, convenient and good; in that we presume to see what is meet and convenient, better than God himself. Hooker.

God, to remove his ways from human sense,

Plac'd heav'n from earth so far, that earthly light,

If it presume, might err in things too high,

And no advantage gain. Milton's Par. Lost, b. viii.

6. It has on or upon sometimes before the thing supposed, or causing presumption.

He, that would not deceive himself, ought to build his hypothesis on matter of fact, and not presume on matter of fact, because of his hypothesis. Locke.
